THE HALE FUTURE

What is it the future holds for us? No one, except perhaps Peter DeLuise (we don't know if that's even right), can be one hundred per cent certain as to what we have to expect. But we at Hale have made some educated guesses...okay, scratch the educated part of that...

- 47th President, David Sanchez announces that the new $6 coin will feature President John Adams. The fact that Adams was the sixth president turns out to be in fact, coincidental.

- Rapper Eminem will reunite with his on again, off again wife Kim Mathers for a movie based on the life of President Sanchez. Orlando Bloom will play Secretary of State Johannsen.

- Record numbers of shoppers will attend the first Cleveland Shopping Fest involving 400 retail chains and one MacGuyver look-alike selling car soap.

- The return of former fast food restaurant Rax will spell doom for the much loved Oven Mitt character of Arby's fame.

- As housing costs continue to decrease, the amount of "gel" in Al Sharpton's hair will increase. This of course will be downplayed as coincidence.

- More and more children will find themselves trapped in supermarket crane games. But not for want of a specific toy, but because of Overlord Victorium's decree that all first born will be turned into "Slavery Prizes." President Sanchez, being no more than a figurehead by this point will be powerless to stop Victorium's mighty reign of terror.

- Speaking of mighty reigns of terror, comedian Gilbert Gottfried will finally get a lead role - as the voice of the duck in Aflac - The Movie. He will star opposite Kirstie Alley, who will have, at this point gained 400 pounds and lost 200 of it.

Well, there you have it folks - the Hale Future. We're just guessing remember, so don't worry quite yet - all may not yet be lost.■

A Hale Mini-Interview

Subject: Dr. Nancy Mroczek, Ph.D.

Yes, indeed she is an actual doctor folks. Not only does she hold a doctorate in behavior and neuropsychology, she also is the lead singer of a hard-hitting Boston based punk band, which brings her activism and music to "the chumps who need to be learned." We recently got the good doctor to answer a few quick email questions for us:

H: What prompted the delving into music, most specifically the type of music you perform?
N: Loved music all my life; a (natural) (& sort of direct) way of expressing; the music I write is the music that comes out of me. The style can be variable as well.

H: Variable how? As in old school punk one moment to freeform jazz the next? Or not that wide on the spectrum?
N: Variable across the board; least likely (but not out), is classical.

H: As a psychologist, do you take your background on stage to judge the behavior of the audience you're playing for and use that to your advantage to keep them into it?
N: I think I'm more of an ordinary self conscious human being about it. If anything, I'm probably paying attention to or trying to tune into skills of being a performer/communicator, being aware of what I'm doing, and trying to be effective in getting across.

H: In your years of schooling for your chosen profession, did you ever imagine yourself on stage, throwing out songs like "1978" (available on the Hale Music Sampler)?
N: Though I never "imagined" or "dreamed" per se, I've been in tune with what's going down. I've lived [a] pretty [free] nonacademic existence as well; I'm serious, but not affected and not defined by my profession only. Regarding the song "1978:" I'm extremely downhearted by the problems of environment and the suffering and destruction caused to natural life. On top of that, the effective torture of poor animals "used" for "research" is staggering.

H: Here's a bit of role reversal for you. Word association:
a. Boston music scene
N: Not too informed about it except experiences of playing clubs, arduousness to get gigs - the trend seems to be for lots of bands touring from other places
b. Plughead Monkeys (the name of Dr. Mroczek's backing band)
N: 3 guys of the now generation, self named because of animals in 'research' effectively tortured by cranial surgery & electrodes in their heads
c. Antidisestablishmentarianism
N: longest word in the English dictionary - (is it?) Does it mean to be against the establishment? I'm neither for or against 'establishment' in general. I'm against many policies of the current political regime
